

What is the difference between the Fair Market Rents and Payment Standards?

Fair Market Rents are established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and represent average rents by bedroom size, in a particular geographical area. Payment Standards are set by each local Housing Authority to reflect the actual rental demands in the particular jurisdiction. The Payment Standard is between 90 and 110% of the Fair Market Rent.